40 JUDGMENT

1 Introduction

2

3 1. At the hearing on 20 November 2018 of the winding up petition presented in respect of 4 Abraaj Holdings (“the Company”) by the Public Institution for Social Security (“PIFSS”)
5 on 25 May 2018 (“the Petition”)

6 (a) the Joint Provisional Liquidators (“the JPLs”) sought an adjournment of the Petition 7 for a further period of three months;

8 (b) PIFSS opposed the adjournment and sought an Order that the Company be wound up; 9 and

10 (c) Mr Abudulhameed Jafar (a creditor and member of the Liquidation Committee) (“Mr.
11 Jafar”) and Mr Arif Naqvi (a director, shareholder and the Company’s founder) (“Mr 12 Naqvi”) appeared and made submissions in support of the adjournment sought by the 13 JPLs.

14 2. The Court ordered a further adjournment of the Petition and gave leave to PIFSS, Mr 15 Jafar, Mr Naqvi and the JPLs to make short written submissions in relation to the costs of 16 the hearing.

17 3. As the Court understands it, each of Mr Jafar and Mr Naqvi is seeking an Order that 18 PIFSS pay: (i) their costs; and (ii) the JPL’s costs.

19 4. The JPLs state that they are not aware that any party (other than the JPLs themselves) is 20 seeking an Order that their costs are to be paid out of the Company’s assets. The JPLs 21 reserve the right to make further submissions in this regard if necessary.

22 5. The position of the JPLs in summary form is set out as follows at paragraphs 6-10 of their 23 Written Submissions:

1 “6. The JPLs’ position is that no further Order is appropriate in the circumstances 2 and oppose the making of an Order that PIFFS pay the JPLs’ costs of the hearing 3 on 20 November 2018.

4 7. Order 24, rule 8(1) of the Companies Winding Up Rules 2018 (“CWR”) provides:

5 “The general rule is that the costs incurred by a person who successfully presents 6 a creditor’s winding up petition under Order 3, Part II or creditor’s petition for a 7 supervision order under Order 15, rule 3 should have his costs paid out of the 8 assets of the company, such costs to be fixed on an indemnity basis unless agreed 9 with the official liquidator.”

10 8. The CWR does not provide for the present circumstances in which a petitioner 11 has been unsuccessful not because the grounds for the making of a winding up 12 order have not been established, but because the Court has concluded, having 13 considered the views of the provisional liquidators and the majority of the 14 Liquidation Committee, that it is in the best interests of the Company’s creditors 15 for the Company to remain in provisional liquidation for the time being.

16 9. However, CWR 0.24, r.9(4) provides for the situation in which a creditor or 17 contributory opposes a sanction application (emphasis added):

18 “In the case of a sanction application which is made or opposed by a creditor or 19 contributory, the general rule is that-

20 (a) his costs of successfully making or opposing the application should be paid out of 21 the assets of the company, such costs to be taxed on an indemnity basis if not 22 agreed with the official liquidator; and 23 (b) no order for costs should be made against a creditor or contributory whose 24 application or opposition is unsuccessful, unless the Court is satisfied that his 25 position was wholly unreasonable or he is guilty of having misled the Court or 26 otherwise acting improperly in connection with the application.”

1 10. While the hearing on 20 November 2018 was not the hearing of a sanction 2 application, the Court was being asked to consider matters concerning the 3 conduct of the provisional liquidation and whether it should proceed. The JPLs 4 therefore submit that the Court should follow this approach in the present case, 5 and should only make an order for costs against PIFSS if its conduct was wholly 6 unreasonable, misleading or improper in some way.”

7 The Written Submissions of Mr. Naqvi

8 6. Mr. Naqvi is not a creditor of the Company and according to PIFSS he has no interest in 9 the economic outcome of the liquidation. He was involved in senior management and 10 apparently owns one common share.

11 7. Mr. Naqvi’s central contention is stated at paragraph 3 of Mr. Moss Q.C.’s Written 12 Submissions:

13 “3. The conduct of PIFSS in seeking a winding up order in the face of opposition 14 from the JPLs, Mr Naqvi and the majority of AH’s liquidation committee was 15 unreasonable and resulted in Mr Naqvi being put to the expense of attending the 16 Hearing by Leading Counsel to oppose the winding up of AH, which it considers 17 would have been greatly to the detriment of the Companies’ creditors. Had PIFSS 18 not opposed the adjournment, no attendance on behalf of Mr Naqvi would have 19 been necessary and there need only have been a very brief, unopposed hearing, as 20 in the case of AIML. Accordingly, Mr Naqvi seeks an order that PIFSS pay its 21 costs of the Hearing. Mr Naqvi’s submissions were cited with approval in the 22 judgment granting the adjournment and played a significant part in persuading 23 the Court to adjourn in the interests of creditors.”

24 8. It is submitted by Mr. Naqvi that although the costs of a winding up petition are in the 25 discretion of the Court, nonetheless the general rule is that a successful party to any 26 proceeding should recover from the opposing party the reasonable costs incurred by him 27 in conducting that proceeding.

1 9. Quite apart from the issue of what course is unreasonable for a party to take, as the Court 2 has previously indicated there is in fact a question as to whether Mr. Naqvi on 20 3 November 2018 was actually a party at all. The Court is not adequately satisfied that this 4 was even the case.

5 10. In addition, Mr Naqvi appears to accept that an exception to the normal rule that the loser 6 pays the costs “is only applicable when the petitioning creditor has acted reasonably in 7 presenting and prosecuting the petition.”

8 11. Mr Moss adds in paragraph 8 of the Submissions that if a petitioning creditor has acted 9 unreasonably then it will be ordered to pay the costs of the company and the opposing 10 creditors (A E Hayter & Sons (Porchester) Ltd. [1961] I WLR1008, 1012).

11 12. Notwithstanding the preference of the JPLs’ for a higher threshold test in terms of a 12 position being taken that was “wholly unreasonable”, the Court in principle prefers to 13 adopt by way of general guidance the more conservative test as to whether a person has 14 acted unreasonably.

15 13. The submissions then record that at the hearing the JPLs, Mr. Naqvi and Mr. Jafar 16 successfully opposed the application by PIFSS that the Company be wound up.

17 14. The following arguments are also made at paragraph 11:

18 “11. The conduct of PIFSS in pressing for a winding up order was unreasonable in the 19 circumstances:

20 (1) A majority of AH’s liquidation committee, of which PIFSS is a member, opposed 21 a winding up order on the grounds that it could have an adverse effect on the 22 sales process of the company’s assets that is currently underway and thus would 23 have an adverse effect on AH’s creditors. It would also prevent any chance of a 24 restructuring.

1 (2) Investigation (and, potentially prosecution) of claims that AH might have can be 2 adequately undertaken by the AH JPLs and so the placement of AH into official 3 liquidation was unnecessary.

4 (3) AH is already in provisional liquidation and under the control of the AH JPLs 5 who have a duty to act in the interests of all of AH's creditors. While PIFSS was 6 entitled to enforce the debt owed by AH by way of winding up proceedings, once 7 AH was placed into a collective insolvency process it was no longer reasonable of 8 PIFSS to seek to pursue its own interests against the wishes of the AH JPLs and of 9 AH's other creditors.

10 (4) PIFSS provided no evidence to justify its application for an immediate winding up 11 order and so the only basis on which it seeks a winding up order is the mere 12 existence of a debt owed to it. As was explained by Pennycuick J in In re Riviera 13 Pearls Ltd, this is insufficient justification for a winding up order when a 14 company is already in an insolvency process and resulted in a costs order being 15 made against the petitioning creditor in that case.

16 (5) In its skeleton argument for the hearing, PIFSS presented a distorted view of 17 provisional liquidation based on out-of-date quotations from cases that have since 18 been superseded. Its skeleton argument failed to acknowledge that provisional 19 liquidators are commonly granted wide powers in order to manage the affairs of 20 insolvent companies and this had to be brought to the court's attention by Mr 21 Naqvi's counsel at the Hearing. PIFSS' conduct in this regard hindered the 22 ability of the Court to deal with the matter in a "just, expeditious and economical 23 way" (which includes, "ensuring that the substantive law is rendered effective 24 and that it is carried out") as required by the Overriding Objective (paragraphs 25 1.1 and 1.2 (a) of the Preamble to the GCR)."

26 15. While the Court has had no difficulty in concluding that the application by PIFSS should 27 fail, the much narrower question in relation to costs is whether PIFSS acted unreasonably

1 in making that application. The Court is far from satisfied on these issues before it that it 2 did act unreasonably.

3
4 The Written Submissions of Mr. Jafar

5 In his Written Submissions on behalf of Mr. Jafar Lord Faulkner of Thoroton Q.C. states 6 that Mr. Jafar applies for his costs against PIFSS. He does not apply for his costs against 7 any other person, or for an order that his costs be paid from the estate of the companies.
8 The costs that he seeks are not limited to his attendance at the hearing 20 November 2018 9 but relate to all his costs in relation to that hearing of the adjourned petition of PIFSS for 10 the winding up of the Company.

11 16. Mr. Jafar's position is then comprehensively stated at paragraph 3 of the Submissions:

12 "3. In summary, Mr. Jafar seeks the above costs against PIFSS for the following reasons:

13 (1) In a dispute in relation to a creditor's winding up petition, the court has 14 jurisdiction to make a costs order in favour of a creditor who opposes a winding 15 up order.

16 (2) PIFSS applied for an order for official liquidation on its petition on 20 November 17 2018. In this, PIFSS was opposed by:

18 (a) The JPLs of AH; and

19 (b) Mr Jafar, whose opposition was consistent with the views of the majority of AH's 20 creditors by number and by value.

21 (3) But for PIFSS's application for an order for official liquidation, AH would not 22 have been placed into official liquidation and PIFSS's petition would have been 23 adjourned on the terms proposed by the JPLs. There would have been no need for 24 a contested hearing had PIFSS not opposed the proposed adjournment for its own 25 reasons and contrary to the views expressed by the majority of AH's creditors and

1 the JPLs, who are the officers of the court and whose views should normally be 2 accorded substantial weight.

3 (4) A hearing was, therefore, necessitated by PIFSS's opposition to the proposed 4 adjournment. The adjournment proposed by the JPLs was ultimately ordered only 5 after this court considered and rejected PIFSS's written and oral submissions.

6 (5) In responding to PIFSS's opposition, the JPLs played an important part at the 7 hearing, but their role was necessarily limited and did not respond directly to 8 PIFSS's reasons for seeking an official liquidation:

9 (a) First, the JPLs' focus was the explanation of their practical reasons for seeking a 10 short further adjournment, principally a concern about the potential impact on 11 asset realisations by AH (as to K Electric, amongst other assets) and also by 12 AIML (as to the Platform).

13 (b) Secondly, the JPLs could not explain the views of the majority of creditors, which 14 was a role undertaken primarily by Mr Jafar.

15 (c) Thirdly, it was Mr Jafar who engaged directly with the substance of PIFSS's 16 submissions for an official liquidation. As to this:

17 (i) PIFSS had submitted, in essence: that AH was insolvent (a matter of 18 common ground); that the purpose of the JPLs' appointment was to 19 propose a restructuring; and that there was no prospect of a restructuring 20 because PIFSS held a "blocking position".

21 (ii) Mr Jafar, in response, submitted: that the affairs of AH were complex and 22 there were a variety of legal means by which a restructuring might be 23 implemented; that Mr Naqvi and the Board of AH had developed a 24 restructuring proposal and were seeking to respond to the JPLs' and 25 creditors' preliminary views on that proposal; that it was, therefore, 26 "premature" for PIFSS to assert a "blocking position" (because that

1 expression is meaningful only in relation to a crystallised proposal to be 2 voted on); and that, in any case, a “blocking position” is a concept 3 relevant to a scheme of arrangement only, whereas, in this context, the 4 court might sanction a relevant “compromise” or “arrangement” between 5 group companies even in the face of opposition from a company’s 6 creditors’ committee (as in fact happened in the BCCI litigation).”

7 17. In this context, however, the Court also carefully reminds itself of the countervailing 8 Written Submissions of PIFSS, at paragraph 22:

9 “22. As to Mr. Jafar, he was not obliged to attend: he was not the applicant or 10 respondent in any application before the Court. If her had not been represented, 11 the JPLs would have made legal argument on his (and the other creditors’) 12 behalf. Further, it is to be noted that Mr. Jafar is a member of the LC, which 13 could have chosen to appoint its own counsel. Counsel to the LC would have been 14 paid out of the assets of the Company, and not paid for by the individual 15 creditors. Nonetheless, Mr. Jafar has instructed Leading Counsel to attend on 16 previous occasion (in particular, on 18 July, as to which see paragraph 28.2 17 below) and he would no doubt have attended the hearing, regardless of the 18 position adopted by PIFSS.”

19 18. Mr. Jafar appears to accept that the practice should be not to make a costs order provided 20 the relevant creditor acts reasonably, albeit a narrower proposition than Mr. Naqvi as a 21 non-creditor has been obliged to adopt.

22 19. There is no doubt that PIFSS’s opposition to the proposed adjournment was the expressed 23 view of a minority creditor, and that its position was contrary to the views expressed by 24 the JPLs. Equally, PIFSS failed to establish or even to identify any immediate tangible 25 benefit to be derived from an official liquidation, as distinct from the very wide ranging 26 scope of the provisional arrangements already in place.

1 20. Nonetheless, the Court is most reluctant to discourage open debate on matters which 2 individual creditors may believe to be of substantial importance. For this reason, if indeed 3 for no other, the Court would be most hesitant and reluctant to deter relevant parties from 4 stating where they consider they need to state by imposing costs orders upon them for 5 doing so. Once again, the Court is not convinced by Mr. Jafar's submissions that PIFSS 6 has acted unreasonably.

7 8 The Written Submissions of PIFSS

9
10 21. As previously indicated, PIFSS had unsuccessfully argued at the hearing that the current 11 provisional liquidation should come to an end and that the Company should be placed 12 into provisional liquidation.

13 22. In the exercise of its discretion to decide to continue with the provisional liquidation, the 14 Court expressly took into account the following factors:

- 15 (i) The complexity of the underlying matters;
- 16 (ii) The nature of what might be termed “ a substantial period of time” in directly 17 addressing that considerable complexity;
- 18 (iii) The genuine division of opinion on the part of creditors on this issue;
- 19 (iv) The potential prejudice to proposed or contemplated divestments which could 20 otherwise result from an immediate official liquidation;
- 21 (v) The reluctance of the Court to pre-empt any scheme of arrangement or 22 restructuring proposal that might be forth coming;
- 23 (vi) That there was no immediate benefit of an official liquidation at that time; and

1 (vii) It was advantageous for the Court to await developments.

2
3 23. The Court has set out this reasoning in order to emphasise that PIFSS made a spirited 4 and valuable contribution to an on-going debate upon these important subjects and that 5 the Court is fully cognizant of that contribution.

6 24. In Mr Hobden's Written Submissions he states at paragraphs 5-7:

7 "5. PIFSS opposes the Costs Applications in the strongest possible terms. In summary:

8 (i) It would be highly unusual, and contrary to principle, to order one creditor 9 to pay the costs of another creditor or contributory on the adjournment of a 10 winding up petition. No such order should be made absent unreasonable 11 conduct.

12 (ii) Although the Court decided to adjourn the petition, PIFSS's position that a 13 winding up order should be made was not unreasonable. Different creditors 14 could legitimately take different views on the question.

15 (iii) Neither Mr. Jafar no Mr. Naqvi have been put to any additional costs by 16 reason of PIFSS's opposition to the adjournment.

17 (iv) An order that PIFSS should meet the costs of any other creditor or 18 contributory would be inconsistent with the approach taken to date in these 19 proceedings.

20 6. The basis for Mr. Jafar's and Mr. Naqvi's application for costs has not yet been 21 properly explained, and PIFSS reserves the right to respond, if necessary, to their 22 written submissions.

23 7. It is understood that the JPLs do not seek an order that PIFSS pays their costs. That 24 being the case, PIFSS will make no submissions in that regard. PIFSS expressly 25 reserves its right to make submissions in response if the JPLs seek any such order. It

1 is therefore evident that the JPLs are of the opinion that PIFSS's position at the 2 Hearing was justified."

3
4 25. Mr. Hobden also indicates at paragraph 10 that there appears to be no instance in the 5 reported cases where one creditor has been ordered to pay the costs of another creditor on 6 the adjournment of a winding up.

7 26. Then at paragraph 11 (ii) Mr. Hobden helpfully relies upon French, Applications to 8 Winding Up Companies, Third Edition 2015, at 5. 188:

9 "If the petition of an unpaid creditor whose debt is undisputed is refused only because the 10 court accepts the view of opposing creditors that there should not be a compulsory 11 winding up, no order as to costs will be made, unless the petitioner was acting 12 unreasonably, for example, where the petitioner ought to have known that the petition 13 would fail."

14 27. Turning to the question of whether there is a basis for any finding of unreasonable 15 conduct, Mr. Hobden properly submits at paragraphs 13, 14, and 15:

16 "13. There is no dispute by any party that at the Hearing that the Honourable Court 17 could have made a winding up order. Nor is there any dispute in respect of 18 PIFSS's debt, which is due and owing. PIFSS is the single largest creditor of the 19 Company with amounts owing in excess of $200 million.

20 14. PIFSS took the view that the continuation of the provisional liquidation served no 21 useful purpose, and argued at the Hearing that the Company should be placed 22 into official liquidation. Whilst the majority of the Company's liquidation 23 committee ("LC") sought a continuation of the provisional liquidation, it was not 24 PIFSS alone that took a contrary position. Commercial Bank of Dubai took a 25 neutral approach as to whether the Company continued to provisional liquidation 26 or official liquidation.

1 15. The Position of PIFSS was not unreasonable. The question whether the 2 provisional liquidation should be continued was one on which different creditors 3 could reasonably take different views. In saying that the Company should be 4 placed into official liquidation, PIFSS was advocating the course that it 5 considered would benefit the body of the Company’s creditors as a whole: it was 6 not seeking to gain for itself some illegitimate sectional advantage. It is 7 respectfully submitted that in a complex proceeding such as this, the Learned 8 Judge benefits from hearing the views of competing creditors.”

9 10 28. The Court most readily concurs in the merits of these comments. They reflect and 11 describe reasonable conduct as distinct from unreasonable conduct.

12 29. Finally, at paragraph 25 the Court is reminded of the historical background to these 13 proceedings:

14 “25. An order that PIFSS should meet the costs of any other creditor or contributory 15 would depart from the approach taken to date in these proceedings. At a number 16 of hearings, adversarial positions have been taken, and significant legal teams 17 engaged, but no costs orders have been made to date. Against that background, it 18 would be inconsistent and unfair to make a costs order against PIFSS, even if it 19 were otherwise appropriate to do so.”

20
21 30. Once again, Mr. Hobden makes an excellent point.

22
23 The Written Submissions of the Joint Provisional Liquidators

24 31. Having set out their legal arguments as to unreasonableness, the JPLs then continue at 25 paragraphs 11 and 12 of their Written Submissions in this manner:

1 “11. PIFSS conduct was clearly none of these things:

2 (a) as petitioner, PIFSS was entitled to seek a winding up order and the grounds 3 for making of a winding up order (i.e. the insolvency of the Company) is not in 4 dispute;

5 (b) as the JPLs’ submitted at the hearing, the question of whether the Company 6 should stay in provisional liquidation for a further short period or be placed 7 into official liquidation was finely balanced;

8 (c) the JPLs have sympathy for PIFSS’ position, but on balance determined that 9 the best approach was to seek a further adjournment. However, the JPLs do 10 not consider that it was unreasonable for PIFSS to ask the Court to test the 11 case for a further adjournment; and 12 (d) the JPLs would have needed to persuade the Court of the case for a further 13 adjournment of the Petition regardless of whether there was any opposition 14 from PIFSS or any other creditors. PIFSS’ opposition therefore did not cause 15 the JPLs’ to incur any significant additional cost.

16 12. The JPLs therefore respectfully submit that PIFSS should not be ordered to pay the 17 JPLs’ costs of the hearing.”

18 32. The Court considers this argument to be correct, and in particular the Court would 19 approve the point made at paragraph 11 (d).

20 21 Conclusion

22 33. The Court has considered all of the submissions made. In this regard the Court accepts 23 and applies a general standard in this context as to whether a relevant party has acted 24 unreasonably in determining that party’s liability for costs.

- 1 34. The Court finds that there is no merit in the submissions made on behalf of Mr. Naqvi 2 and Mr. Jafar that PIFSS was so unjustified as to be unreasonable in presenting its 3 application as it did.
- 4 35. The fact that PIFSS did not prevail in its arguments is in no way an adverse conclusion as 5 to whether the arguments in the first place should have been placed before the Court.
- 6 36. In matters of so complex a nature the Court must be fully receptive to weighing such 7 arguments as a relevant party may wish to put forward.
- 8 37. To impose upon an unsuccessful creditor a costs order where its arguments have failed in 9 these circumstances could be perceived as limiting or discouraging the expression of 10 entirely legitimate differences of opinion.
- 11 38. Accordingly Mr. Naqvi and Mr. Jafar must bear their own costs of the hearing.
